| Hebrew | The Hebrew אתָּ word does not have a corresponding word in English. In Hebrew, it is a marker of the accusative, i.e. the word following it is the object of the sentence. For example, in Genesis 1:1 the word is preceded by בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים (הַחֲצִיר הַפְּנִימִית שְׁלֹשָׁה טוּרֵי נֹזֶת וְטוּר כְּרִתֵּת אֲרָזִים |
| ESV    | He built the inner court with three courses of cut stone and one course of cedar beams.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| NIV    | And he built the inner courtyard of three courses of dressed stone and one course of trimmed cedar beams.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| NLT    | The walls of the inner courtyard were built so that there was one layer of cedar beams between every three layers of finished stone.                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
