| Hebrew | וְאֵי בְמַעַט נִטְיִי רַגְלִי כְּאֵין שִׁפְכִי אֲשַׁרְי                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| ESV    | But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled, my steps had nearly slipped.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| NIV    | But as for me, my feet had almost slipped; I had nearly lost my foothold.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| NLT    | But as for me, I almost lost my footing. My feet were slipping, and I was almost gone.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| LXX    | ἐμοῦ δὲ greek δέ is a conjunction that can mean “but” or “and” or “also” or “moreover”. It is a word that is used very frequently in the New Testament, and is often unexpressed and not translated in English. παρὰ μικρὸν ἔσαλεύθησαν οἱ greek The definite article πόδες παρ ὀλίγον ἐξεχύθη τὰ greek The definite article διαβήματά μου |
| KJV    | But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
